GREETINGS!

We want to tell you a few of the more important facts about our programs, students, and faculty. If you have questions, we hope that you will write or call, or see one of the faculty advisors (see the last page of this document for our department's address, e-mail, and phone information).
WHY CAMPBELL UNIVERSITY?

For those hoping to enter law school, Campbell is one of the few schools to offer a focused and integrated Pre-Law program design to help students both gain admission to law school and do well once they are there. Of those who have attended Campbell's own law school, almost 100% have passed the bar examination upon graduation, and many have stayed at or near the top of their class.

The Department's program in Public Administration is one of the few undergraduate majors in the region to offer that focus. This concentration, combined with a strong commitment to internships, helps Campbell graduates land excellent public service jobs.

The teaching profession offers great opportunities for “molding the future” in both secular and religious environments. The Department's programs for secondary social studies teacher candidates combine a degree in History or Social Science with Teacher Licensure and access to one of our nation's most important careers. For those who do not wish to teach, career opportunities in public history, which entails museum and historical site projects, are viable alternatives.

No other institution in eastern North Carolina has a Criminal Justice Administration major like Campbell's. Graduates will obtain the knowledge and tools they need to land positions in Law Enforcement, Crime Solving, Crime Prevention, Interdiction and Intervention, Educational Programs, Court Systems, Prison Administration, Security Agencies, Drug Enforcement, Technical Analysis, State and Federal Investigative Agencies, Counseling Programs, and Graduate Education. Campbell is also located only forty-five minutes from the resources of the North Carolina Justice Academy in Salemburg.

Elective courses included in most of our majors also provide ample opportunity to pursue a minor in some other field of study. One of the more popular minors is Business Administration, which can be completed by adding to the two economics and mathematics courses required of most department majors another five courses in accounting and management. A recent national study recommended such a combination of a liberal arts degree and a business minor for all students considering a career in the corporate world, and one past dean of the University of North Carolina graduate school of business, a former IBM vice-president, recently recommended the liberal arts degree as the best degree for those hoping to pursue a career in business.

Campbell and the Department of History, Criminal Justice and Political Science maintain a Christian purpose. Unlike secular institutions which often neglect the opportunity to teach a comprehensive view of academic relevance to the "real world," we pride ourselves on emphasizing a wide teaching perspective instead of a narrow, preconditioned approach to a student's understanding; we are intent on preparing individuals for important roles in society.

MAJORS: The Department offers two degrees in four different majors.

- Bachelor of Arts with a major in Political Science, History, or Criminal Justice Administration.
- Bachelor of Science with a major in Social Science and a concentration either in Political Science, History, Criminal Justice Administration or Homeland Security.
SPECIAL PROGRAMS: In addition to the four majors, students may concentrate their efforts in one of several special programs for students with specific career goals:

1. Majors in either Political Science or History may pursue the Pre-Law program which supplements either program with courses in Constitutional Law, British and American History, U.S. Political Science, logic, public speaking, business, psychology, economics, and quantitative methods. The result of the program is a transcript that looks attractive to law school admissions officers and more importantly, the development of the reasoning, communication, and study skills essential for success in law school and the legal profession.

2. The Public Administration program supplements a Political Science major with courses in organizational, financial, and personnel management; it also includes classes in economics, public relations, and speech plus a government internship. The concentration is open to all Political Science majors. Those completing the program are excellent candidates for our nation's public service jobs, and such individuals also possess the reasoning ability and communication skills highly desired by both business corporations and non-profit organizations.

3. The International Studies program can be entered through a major in Political Science or History which is supplemented with courses in comparative government, area studies, international policy making, foreign languages, and multinational economics. This variant of the Political Science or History major would be very suitable for someone hoping to enter the foreign service or one of the federal intelligence agencies. The concentration would also be appropriate for individuals seeking a career in journalism or employment with a company that does business abroad. International Studies majors are encouraged to broaden their horizons through interning in foreign countries; our department majors have been able to spend a semester in such locations as Egypt, Great Britain, Italy, and Spain. Campbell recently inaugurated a Study Abroad program and students have participated in summer trips to Costa Rica, Germany, Great Britain and Italy.

4. History and Social Science majors can also pursue Social Studies Teacher Licensure, a program which combines with the major all the education courses and student teaching required for high school licensure in North Carolina. Campbell’s School of Education is accredited by the National Council on Teacher Education, and if you are planning to teach outside North Carolina, 36 states, including all on the East Coast plus the District of Columbia, have reciprocal contracts with North Carolina’s Department of Public Instruction for accepting our licensure standards.

5. The Department provides a four-year program in Criminal Justice Administration which leads to a Bachelor of Arts in that field. This course of study is suggested for individuals interested in any aspect of the criminal justice system (police, courts, or corrections) and is especially helpful for those wishing to go on to law or graduate school. The course of study includes such classes as criminology, criminal law, justice administration, theories of justice, criminal investigations, forensics, and terrorism. The Department has recently inaugurated a Homeland Security concentration under the auspices of both Criminal Justice and Social Science majors.
INTERNSHIPS: The department's internships, which are open to all its majors, constitute one of its special features. With the state capital, several county seats, and many small towns within an hour drive of the campus, interns continue their studies at Campbell while working for one of a wide variety of public officials or governmental bodies including city managers, county commissioners, district attorneys, state senators, and more. Many students complete summer internship in places as a law office near their hometown, a state museum or historic site, or in the Washington office of a member of Congress.

For those wishing to spend a semester outside North Carolina, Campbell's Washington-based American Studies Program offers four months in our nation's capital. During that period interns take four seminar courses stressing various aspects of domestic and foreign policy and gain first-hand experience of Government by working as an aide to a member of Congress, doing research in a think tank (e.g., Institute for International and Strategic Studies, Heritage Foundation), or serving in one of the agencies of the federal government.

CAREERS: The largest group of the Department's majors go immediately to graduate school, frequently law school. Some begin graduate studies in Political Science or History. The next largest group enters government service, usually as secondary-school social studies teachers or as administrators with a local or state agency. Most of the remaining graduates find positions in business ranging from banking to real estate. Typically, several become army officers as a result of completing Campbell's nationally ranked ROTC program, and a few students have also attended seminary.

ACTIVITIES: The Department's activities constitute one of its most attractive features. For the last ten plus years Campbell has often received the “Best Small School Delegation” award at the annual session of the North Carolina Student Legislature. Our delegations have also won accolades for Best Bill and Best Speaker in the House of Representatives. The Mock Trials Team has competed successfully at the University of Maryland, Furman University (South Carolina), Hamline University (Minnesota), Howard University, Eastern Kentucky University, College of Charleston (2006 Champions), University of South Carolina-Upstate, and Stetson University Law School (Florida). We have also held regional Mock Trials tournaments at Campbell. The Model United Nations has competed in New York City. Our Pi Gamma Mu (Social Sciences Honor Society) chapter has won grants as well as national recognition for the strength of its programs, and we have chapters of Phi Alpha Theta (History Honor Society) and Pi Sigma Alpha (Political Science Honor Society). Our majors frequently lead the campus College Democrats and the College Republicans, and always hold significant positions in Student Government. In 2007, Campbell inaugurated a Pre-Law chapter of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity (actually co-ed), a national organization with many distinguished attorneys in its ranks.

FACULTY: The Department's faculty constitute a diverse and well-qualified group of individuals. All of our full-time Political Science and Criminal Justice faculty have a Ph.D. in their field, and they have earned advanced degrees from the following institutions: Duke University, Old Dominion University, Syracuse University, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, University of South Carolina, University of Southern California, University of Vermont and Campbell’s Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law. Most have written articles in major journals and/or have published books. The Department's full-time History faculty are a diverse group with advanced degrees from Duke, East Carolina University, Emory University, University of Alabama and the University of South Carolina. All have Ph.D.s and acquired teaching experience at a variety of institutions.

The members of the faculty have a deep interest in each student. They come to know their advisees well, and they give careful attention to academic needs. Unlike many large universities, at Campbell you learn from your professors, not graduate assistants. Classes are relatively small (the capstone seminars generally have no more than fifteen members), and professors are available for consultation and assistance.

HOW CAN I PREPARE FOR A MAJOR IN POLITICAL SCIENCE, HISTORY, OR CRIMINAL JUSTICE?

Whether you are anticipating a career in law, business, government, international studies, journalism, education, armed forces, or the ministry, the time to prepare is now. If you are a high school sophomore or junior, take as many courses as possible in English, foreign language, Political Science, history, mathematics, and natural science. If you are a senior, spend some time reviewing what you've learned during your academic career. If you are transferring to us from another institution or department, see one of our faculty for advice. The Department of History, Criminal Justice and Political Science prides itself on offering some of Campbell University's most challenging programs, and our majors are respected on campus and in the community. Good preparation and motivation will result in success!
MEET OUR FACULTY

FULL TIME FACULTY

CATHERINE B. COWLING, Instructor of Criminal Justice, has been at Campbell as a full time faculty member since August 2003. She has served as Interim Director of Criminal Justice since 2008. Before joining our department, Ms. Cowling served as a domestic violence attorney for Cumberland County Legal Aid for three years and as an adjunct professor of criminal law and mock trial coach to criminal justice majors at Campbell. She also served as a child support attorney for the Moore County Child Support Enforcement Agency, a law clerk for East Central Community Legal Services, and as a sixth-grade grade teacher at Dunn (North Carolina) Middle School. A three-time Campbell alumna, she received a Bachelor of Science in Social Science in 1993, a Master of Education in 1996, and a Juris Doctorate from Campbell’s Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law in 1999. In 2003, she was presented with the Campbell University Department of Government History and Justice Distinguished History Alumna award. She is currently pursuing a PHD in criminology and criminal justice at Old Dominion University. Her primary research interest is in the area of domestic violence. She teaches criminal law, criminal procedure, court systems and ethics. Ms. Cowling, a Southern Pines, North Carolina, native, is a member of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences, the American Sociological Society, the Southern Sociological Society, the Southern Criminal Justice Association, and the North Carolina Criminal Justice Association. She and her adopted daughter, Elizabeth Laura live in the Buies Creek area and are members of Divine Street United Methodist Church.

DAVID H GRAY, Visiting Professor of Criminal Justice, has been at Campbell since August 2011. He is a native of California and completed his undergraduate work at Brigham Young University and holds a doctorate from the University of Southern California. A retired U.S. Air Force officer, Dr. Gray is also a former Foreign Service/Central Intelligence Agency officer and program director. He has extensive experience in the national and international security and intelligence communities and has completed assignments for the United States Departments of Defense, Energy, Homeland Security, Justice, and State, as well as, the United Nations, the Congress and the National Intelligence Council. He also served in a number of overseas assignments in various parts of Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Middle East and has worked with many defense, corporate, law enforcement, security and intelligence organizations and services worldwide. Specializing in International, National, and Homeland Security affairs, his expertise includes U.S. and international security and strategic studies; current global security issues; U.S. foreign and national security policy formulation and strategy; globalization and international security; political violence and insurgency; international terrorism; and international weapons proliferation.

LLOYD JOHNSON, Professor of History and Director of Historical Studies, has been at Campbell since August 1991. A North Carolina native, he earned a B.A. in History from Campbell and also received a M.Ed. in Guidance and Counseling from the University. He earned a Master of Arts in History from East Carolina University and received his Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina in 1995. He has a specialty in United States History with a concentration in Colonial America; his research interests include African-American and religion in colonial America. In the summer of 1998, he was a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellow at the University of Virginia. Dr. Johnson teaches Western Civilization, United States History, Colonial America, the Old South, and the New South, and the African Area Study. He has published The Frontier in the Colonial South: South Carolina Backcountry, 1736-1800 (1997). This book is listed in The Best Books for Academic Libraries (2002). Altogether Professor Johnson has produced seventeen book reviews and over 70 encyclopedia articles in various publications. Dr. Johnson co-advises the College Democrats and also co-advises the Alpha Iota Alpha Chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, the International Honor Society in History. He is also the advisor for Pi Gamma Mu. He is a member of Erwin First Baptist Church, and he is involved in many civic and community activities. He is a member of several historical societies on the national and state level. He is currently researching a community study of Cumberland County, North Carolina during the period 1750-1850.

JAMES I. MARTIN, SR., Professor of History and Chair of the Department, has been at Campbell since August 1991. He is a native of Pennsylvania and completed his B.A. degree (cum laude) at Duke University. He also holds an M.A. from East Carolina University and a Ph.D. from Emory University in Atlanta. Before coming to Campbell, Dr. Martin was employed as a social studies teacher and coach at James Kenan High School (Warsaw, North Carolina) and also served as an adjunct at Mount Olive and Sampson Community Colleges. In addition to Western Civilization, he has taught courses dealing with East Asia, Eastern Europe, Latin America, Middle East, Modern Germany, South Asia and Southeast Asia. His research interests include social studies teaching and ethnography, particularly the Jewish community of North Carolina. Dr. Martin and Dr. Johnson serve as co-advisors for the Alpha Iota Alpha Chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, the International History Honor Society. Professor Martin attends Angier United Methodist Church; he and his wife Linda have one son.

BRUCE G. MCNAIR, Associate Professor of History, has been at Campbell since August 1993. A native of Ohio, Dr. McNair earned his B.A. degree (Phi Beta Kappa) from Purdue University (Indiana) and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Duke University. Before coming to Campbell, he taught history at St. Augustine's College in Raleigh and worked in computer programming and architectural drafting for a computer firm in Durham, North Carolina. At Campbell, Professor McNair teaches courses in Western Civilization, Ancient Greece and Rome, the Renaissance and Reformation, Early Modern Europe, England and Modern Europe. Dr. McNair has studied Latin, Italian, French, and German, and his research interests concern the intellectual traditions of the Italian Renaissance. He and his wife Barbara attend Fuquay Presbyterian Church and are the parents of a son and daughter.

SALVATORE MERCOCGLIANO, Assistant Professor of History, has been at Campbell since 2001 as a part-time and now full-time instructor. He earned his B.S. in Marine Transportation from the State University of New York Maritime College, his M.A. in Maritime History and Nautical Archaeology from East Carolina University and his Ph.D. in Military and Naval History at the University of Alabama. He has a forthcoming publication “Sealift: The Evolution of American Military Sea Transportation,” and a volume in the Naval Historical Foundation's series about the Vietnam War. Professor Mercogliano has produced articles and reviews for Sea History, Parameters, The Nautical Research Journal, Northern Mariner, and the Journal of Military History. In 2006, Professor Mercogliano taught at the United States Military Academy (West Point), where he filled in for an officer deployed to Iraq. At Campbell he offers courses in Western Civilization and United States History. Before coming to Campbell full-time, Dr. Mercogliano taught full-time at Central Carolina Community College in Sanford, and also served as a lecturer at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He also works as an adjunct professor in Maritime Industry Policy at the United States Merchant Marine Academy. Dr. Mercogliano and his wife Kathy, a Campbell law alumna, have one son.

JOHN C. MERO, Assistant Professor of Political Science, came to Campbell in August 2008. He grew up in a small paper-mill town in the Adirondack Mountains of New York State. Professor Mero holds a B.A. from the State University of New York at Plattsburgh and an M.A. from the University of Vermont. He completed his Ph.D. in Political Science at Syracuse University’s Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. His fields of study are American governmental institutions and public administration. Throughout his career, Dr. Mero has blended these two interests in academia and the private sector. After earning his M.A., he worked as a survey associate conducting social policy research at Mathematica Policy Research in Princeton, New Jersey. More recently, he was a research associate at the Center for Community Alternatives, a non-profit agency in Syracuse focused on finding alternatives to incarceration for non-violent offenders. Dr. Mero spent extensive time in Bolivia conducting field research for his master’s thesis on state policies promoting the eradication of Chagas' disease. He spent time in Chile in the early 1990s and witnessed the transition of power from General Pinochet to Patricio Aylwin and his democratic coalition government. Other research brought him to Peru, Argentina, and Mexico. Before joining Campbell, Dr. Mero served as a Visiting Professor of Political Science at High Point University and taught summer classes at Guilford College. He teaches American National Government, State and Local Government, Organizational Theory, Public Administration, and Public Policy.

DONALD N. SCHROEDER, Associate Professor of Political Science, has been at Campbell since 1978. A native of Illinois, he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle and received the Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy degrees in Political Science from Duke University. Before coming to Campbell, Dr. Schroeder taught at Louisiana State University, St. Xavier College (Chicago), Oakton Community College (Illinois), and Lamar University (Texas). Professor Schroeder's primary fields of interest are political philosophy (particularly those of Aristotle and John Rawls) and constitutional law. During his tenure at Campbell he has taught American National Government, Ancient Political Thought, Medieval Political Thought, Modern European Political Thought, American Political Thought, Constitutional Development, and Constitutional Law. He is presently working on articles dealing with Aristotle's political philosophy. Dr. Schroeder serves as advisor to the Campbell chapters of the North Carolina Student Legislature and College Republicans. He is also a gourmet chef.

JACLYN STANKE, Associate Professor of History, came to Campbell in 1999. Dr. Stanke is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Washington State University, where she earned B.A. degrees in both Political Science and Foreign Languages and Literatures (Russian). She holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in History from Emory University. Before coming to Campbell, Professor Stanke taught at Emory and Carroll College (Waukesha, Wisconsin). At Campbell she teaches introductory classes in Western Civilization and American history, and upper-division courses in Nineteenth and Twentieth Century
United States History, American Foreign Policy, and Eastern European/Russian History. She also offers graduate courses in American and European history. Her research interests include: US-Soviet relations during the Cold War, Popular Culture and the Cold War, and oral history. Dr. Stanke attends St. Bernadette Catholic Church in Fuquay-Varina.

DAVID W. THORNTON, Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of Political Science Studies, has been at Campbell since August 1994. He was born in Texas and grew up in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. Dr. Thornton holds bachelors and masters degrees from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and a Ph.D. in International Relations from the University of South Carolina. Before embarking on his graduate career, Professor Thornton was involved in the business world; his book Airbus Industrie: The Politics of an International Industrial Collaboration (1995) reflects his interests in both economics and world affairs. Dr. Thornton presently teaches American National Government, Comparative Government, International Relations, Economic History, and Foreign Policy; he also advises the Pi Sigma Alpha Political Science Honor Society and the Campbell delegation of the Model United Nations. He presently resides near Willow Springs, North Carolina, with his wife Diane, son, and daughter.

CATHY MERCADO, our Administrative Assistant, joined the department in April 2011. She was born in Hamlet, North Carolina and presently lives in Coats, North Carolina. She has operated a business with her husband, and worked as administrative assistant at First Presbyterian Church in Dunn. In her nineteen years at Campbell University, Cathy held positions at Photo Graphics and Enrollment Management and Marketing. She is also a real estate agent with ERA Strother Real Estate. She is married to J.T. Mercado and they are the parents of a daughter, Amy, and three sons, Bucky, Paul and Clayton. She has one granddaughter named Abbey. Her daughter, Amy, graduated from Campbell in 2007 and 2009. Her daughter-in-law, Barbara, graduated in 2005.

ADJUNCT FACULTY

ROBERT BIDWELL, Adjunct Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice, holds a B.S. from Campbell, an M.S. from The George Washington University and a Fellowship in Forensic Medicine from the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology. He is a graduate of the FBI National Academy and the Mumford Institute of Polygraphy. He is a retired Army CID Special Agent, police chief and deputy sheriff.

JENNIFER DAVIS-DOYLE, Adjunct Assistant Professor of History, holds a B.A. from Meredith College and an M.A. from North Carolina State University. She is a licensed secondary teacher who is pursuing a Ph.D. in Curriculum and Instruction (History Concentration) at N.C. State.

KENDRA ERICKSON, Adjunct Assistant Professor of History, holds a B.A. from Campbell University in English and an M.A. from North Carolina State University in Public History. Born in Texas and raised in North Carolina, her research interests include U.S. Southern history, Civil Rights in U.S. Memory, and international funerary customs and memorialization.

THOMAS LLOYD, Adjunct Assistant Professor of Geography, has taught at Campbell since 1991. He is Director of Planning and Inspection for Cumberland County, North Carolina, and holds a Master of Arts degree in Geography from Appalachian State University.

PHILLIP L. MELVIN, Adjunct Assistant Professor of History, is an Asian area specialist who is currently teaching at Campbell as an adjunct. Prior to coming to Campbell in February 1982, he retired from the United States Air Force with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel after 23 years service as a pilot, operations officer, flight safety officer and intelligence officer. He held the position of dean of students at Campbell for 18½ years prior to retiring in 2000. Colonel Melvin’s educational background includes a B.A. from the University of Maryland in History and M.A. in Asian Studies from Florida State University plus numerous service schools. While on active duty in the Air Force, he spent six years in Japan, one year each in Thailand and Vietnam and traveled extensively throughout East and Southeast Asia. His assignments included serving in special operations and as commander of an intelligence operations unit.

DENNIS NATHANIEL, Adjunct Assistant Professor of Geography, has taught at Campbell since 1993. He holds a B.A. in Geography from India’s Agra University and an M.A. in the same discipline from Allahabad University. He is a full-time professor at Fayetteville State University.

JENNIFER ZEMA PITTMAN, Adjunct Assistant Professor of History, holds a BS (2006) and Masters (2009) in Secondary Social Science Education from Campbell University. She also received National Board Certification in 2010. She has taught at Triton High School (Erwin, NC) since 2006, where she also served as the Social Studies Department Chair and AIG (Academically/Intellectually Gifted) Coordinator. She married JEREMY PITTMAN, a Criminal Justice graduate from our department, in 2007, and has two young children.

MICHAEL SLATTERY, Adjunct Assistant Professor of Political Science, is a retired Naval Officer who has taught Political Science and History courses at Campbell University since 1995. He earned his Bachelor of Science degree from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, MD, and holds a Master of Arts degree in Political Science and International Affairs from the University of South Florida. He is also a graduate of the Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island, and the National War College of the National Defense University, Washington, DC. Captain Slattery has been featured in various books on military history including: SEALS in Vietnam by Eric Micheletti and The History of the U.S. Navy SEALs by David Jordan. He also participated in the production of a documentary video entitled Prepared to Serve, the U.S. Naval Academy during the Vietnam War. This award winning video outlined the combat experiences of Naval Academy graduates during the Vietnam War. The article that he co-authored with an Academy classmate for the U.S. Naval Institute’s Proceedings describing the role of Navy SEALs during an attempted top secret rescue of two escaping American POWs from North Vietnam was instrumental in the formal recognition of those SEALs for heroism by the Secretary of the Navy after more than three decades of secrecy. His related article paying tribute to his Naval Academy classmate and SEAL Teammate who led and was killed during the mission was cited in remarks during the award ceremony in which the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff presented the Bronze Star with Combat “V” Distinguishing Device to the surviving family members. The event was covered by several national and local news media, including the Washington Post. Professor Slattery teaches National Government, American Military History, The Political and Military History of the Cold War and the Vietnam War.
KAREN G. WOOD, Adjunct Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice, has been at Campbell since 2000. She earned her Bachelor of Science Degree in Criminal Justice from Appalachian State University (1996), and holds a Master of Criminal Justice Degree from the University of South Carolina (1998). She holds the position as Deputy Director for the NC Conference of District Attorneys. The NC Conference of District Attorneys is a state agency comprised of the 44 Elected District Attorneys across the state. She has taught the following courses for Campbell University over the last 11 years: Ethics in Government, Victimology, and Youth at Risk.

MEET OUR DEPARTMENTAL ALUMNI

CHAD ABOUD (B.A. '06) graduated with honors from Campbell as a Government major with a Business Administration minor. He was captain of the men’s soccer team, and since graduating from Campbell, has furthered his education at the Osgoode Hall Law School and the Schulich School of Business in Toronto, Ontario, Canada. He will be graduating with both his JD and MBA degrees in May 2010 and will commence as a lawyer at Cassels Brock & Blackwell LLP, a major corporate law firm located downtown Toronto, in August. A BRIEF HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE HISTORY, CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND POLITICAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT
BY DR. LLOYD JOHNSON

Courses currently taught by the Department of History, Criminal Justice and Political Science were offered in the nineteenth century when Campbell was known as Buies Creek Academy. Some of the earliest textbooks used were Moore’s North Carolina and Hansell’s United States. (Buies Creek Academy Catalogue, 1893-94, p. 6).

When Buies Creek Academy became Campbell Junior College in 1926, Professor Johnnie Edward Ayscue joined the faculty that year. He taught for twenty-four years and retired in 1950. He offered courses in speech and debate as well as classes in history and government. “Uncle Johnnie” was one of the first faculty members to teach introductory government and civics courses at Campbell, beginning in the 1920s. (Pierce, Campbell College, pp. 107-08). One of the first Ph.D.s in Social Sciences to join the faculty was Dr. Marvin L. Skaggs, who came to Campbell in 1934. He obtained his doctorate at the University of North Carolina and taught at Campbell until 1948, when he embarked on a college teaching career in Greensboro. He also made a tremendous impact on one of his students, whom he inspired to attend graduate school. That student was Dr. Elmer Puryear, who graduated from Campbell College and later obtained his Ph.D. in history at Chapel Hill. Another faculty member who taught in the Social Science Department was Gilbert Allen Tripp, who began at Campbell in the fall of 1944 and retired in the mid-1960s. He taught primarily North Carolina and American History. The 1958 Pine Burr college yearbook was dedicated to him.

Professor George Graham joined the faculty in 1958 and taught government courses full-time. He might be considered one of the first full-time government professors at the College. Campbell obtained four-year status in 1961 and graduated its first class in 1963. The move to a four-year institution allowed the Social Science Department to offer more diverse course offerings in both history and government. History courses included the Far East, Diplomatic History of the United States, Ancient History, Medieval History, and the History of Modern England (taught for the first time by Professor William Tuck, who joined the faculty in 1958). Other history courses included Modern and Contemporary Europe and the Recent History of the United States. Government classes included National Government, State and Local Government, Municipal Government, American Political Parties, and Comparative Government. The chairman of the Social Science Department from 1960-64 was Dr. Tennyson Chang; he obtained his Ph.D. in history from Columbia University (New York) and had taught at Georgetown University in Washington, DC, before coming to Campbell. Under him the Social Science Department began to offer sociology and economics as majors; the Department also offered courses in geography. In 1960, there were 15 full-time faculty members in the Department: 4 professors, 8 associate professors, and 3 assistant professors. In the mid-1960s the Business Department absorbed the economics division of the Social Science Department. (Campbell College Bulletin, 1963-64, pp. 82-84).

In 1964 Dr. W. Conard Gass, who had come to Campbell from Tennessee in 1955, became chair of the Department of Social Sciences; he had earned his Doctor of Education degree from Duke University. Also in 1964, Dr. Anne Moore, who had been teaching at the College since 1962, received her Ph.D. in European History from UNC-Chapel Hill. Dr. Elmer Puryear joined the faculty in 1971. and became chairman of the newly created Government Department; Social Sciences continued to function as a separate entity. Dr. Puryear helped establish the Bachelor of Applied Science major in Police Science (Criminal Justice). He also distributed a survey to many law school deans throughout the United States, asking them what courses could best prepare undergraduates for careers in law. The responses to that survey resulted in the creation of the Pre-Law Government major at Campbell. Dr. Puryear also occupied the endowed Barden Chair of Government, which was established in 1971.

On January 5, 1982, the Social Science Department merged with Government and became the Government and History Department. Dr. Puryear headed this new department and his office was located in Baldwin Hall. Dr. David Funderburk joined the Government and History Department in 1978; he taught history and briefly served as departmental chair in 1984, before stepping down to run unsuccessfully for the United States Senate. In 1984 also, Pi Gamma Mu, the international honor society in the social sciences, was formally installed at Campbell. Dr. Walter Barge, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, served briefly as departmental chair in the spring of the same year, followed by Dr. Puryear in 1985. From 1986 through 1991, Dr. James Abrahamson, a Stanford Ph.D. and Army colonel, chaired the Department of Government and History. Under his leadership the Department became involved with the Kenelm Seminar in Southern Pines, and in 1989, the Moore History Lecture was inaugurated in honor of Dr. Anne Moore. Dr. Harold Parker of Duke University delivered the first History Lecture. In 1990, the departmental newsletter, The Messenger, came into being.

In 1991 Dr. Martin P. Sellers became chairman of the Government and History Department. Under Dr. Sellers, the Department has added several majors, including Public Administration, International Studies, and Criminal Justice Administration. Dr. Angela West, the first full-time Criminal Justice Administration faculty member, commenced teaching in fall of 1998; Dr. Bruce Gay was appointed Director of Criminal Justice in 2000. In the spring of 1999, the Campbell chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, the honor society in history, was inaugurated, and a chapter of Alpha Phi Sigma, the criminal justice honor society, was chartered soon after. In 2000 the Department took on the appellative Department of History, Criminal Justice and Political Science, and in the spring of 2001 Campbell installed a chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, honor society in Political Science. In recent years the Department has added Social Science-Criminal Justice and Homeland Security concentrations.

Dr. James I. Martin, Sr. became chair of the Department in May 2003. Currently there are nine full-time faculty members, and eight have earned Ph.D.s. The alumni of the Department now number over 1,700. These individuals work in various careers, including government service, law, teaching, the ministry, and business.

In August 2011, the Department’s appellative was changed to History, Criminal Justice and Political Science.
